Stay healthy

with preventive care and early diagnosis

What exactly is preventive care and early diagnosis?

Many illnesses can be treated better when they are recognised at an early stage. Some – dental caries or diabetes, for example – can be prevented from developing in the first place through regular check-ups.

Who are these offerings for?

Preventive healthcare begins even before birth, with examinations of a mother and her baby during pregnancy. After a child is born, paediatricians offer regular examinations. Dental check-ups are available for the whole family. Specialised preventive examinations are provided by general practitioners and medical specialists such as gynaecologists, dermatologists and urologists.
